BURLATSKIY TV PLAY ON GORBACHEV REFORMS

Moscow Television Service in Russian 0825 GMT 15 Dec 86

[Transcript of play by Fedor M. Burlatskiy: "Two Views From One Office"]

[Text] "Two Views From One Office"

Streshnev: Thank you for coming, Vasilii Romanovich. I didn't really expect to see you. I thought you'd ignore my request. Come in. Will you have some tea?

Shirokov: Tea? Sounds good, I won't refuse tea.

Streshnev: Fine, sit down. Let's have some tea. How come you said so forcefully at the session "at his own request"? After all, you know I've been working away here day and night for 10 years filling in for the first secretary and doing his job for the last 6 months. We've been friends for so many years. We worked in the gorkom together. You didn't warn me. It was like a bolt from the blue... It's not as if we're strangers. Remember we lived together in one room at the academy. Together we mulled over scientific problems. Did you get carried away in the heat of the moment?

Shirokov: Maybe I did, maybe I didn't. I came here Vanya feeling good in the knowledge that you were here. There was someone to lean on.

Streshnev: But how did I fail to live up to your expectations? I greeted you properly and didn't show any annoyance at not being kept on. Isn't that true?

Shirokov: From the personal angle, that seems to be so. In this respect, Ivan, I have no complaints about you. But you amazed me, to say the least, the way you behaved at the bureau session. You seemed like someone else, a different person. But here, Ivan, we'll be speaking frankly.

Streshnev: Were you given advice in Moscow? Were some hints dropped about me? From some authority? Speak to me frankly as to a friend.
